

Berkley Life Sciences LLC to Present at Upcoming LifeScience Alley Event

Claims Expert to Discuss Ways to Boost “Corporate Immune System” in order to Limit Product Liability Exposure

EWING, NJ -- Berkley Life Sciences LLC, the only insurance carrier focusing exclusively on the insurance needs of life science companies, will present at an upcoming LifeScience Alley meeting on May 18th at 8:00 AM at Hamline University, Minneapolis Campus in St. Louis Park, MN. The session will feature Kevin Quinley CPCU, Vice President, Risk Services for Berkley Life Sciences LLC.

The session’s theme is, “Boosting Your Corporate Immune System from Product Liability Claims.”

Additional information about the program and registration can be found at the host organization’s website at www.lifesciencealley.org

About the session ...

Life science companies face a challenging legal and regulatory environment. Among these challenges is the specter of product liability from patients claiming injury from adverse medical outcomes. Funds to pay settlements, judgments and legal fees can potentially become a financial hemorrhage threatening a life science firm’s financial health, solvency, even its very existence.

How can firms stanch the bleeding and boost the immune system when it comes to product liability? What are some of the “hot spots” in product liability claims against life science firms? Most importantly, what proactive risk mitigation strategies can arm life science companies, boosting their immunity and cushioning the impact of tort attacks?

These questions and others will be addressed by Kevin Quinley CPCU of Berkley Life Sciences LLC in his presentation, “Boosting Your Corporate Immune System from Product Liability Claims.” Mr. Quinley has over 20 years of experience in the arena of life science product liability claims and risk management. He has worked with firms as small as startups and as large as Fortune 500 companies in finding ways to defend and mitigate product liability claims. He is the author of over 600 articles and ten books on insurance and risk management.

This session will offer techniques to help boost your corporate immune system, save money and strengthen your financial safety net.
